At Work

Introduction

THIS book has been prepared and published by the Providence Journal Company, first, to show its appreciation of Mr. Milton R. Halladay, its senior cartoonist, and, second, to record in a permanent form a few of the more notable of his drawings which have been such a potent factor for good in the civic life of Rhode Island.

There is a fine quality of sincerity and frankness in Mr. Halladay's work, and, while his pencil has necessarily cut deep at times into the sham and dishonesty of the hour, the whole spirit of his cartoons is one of kindliness.

Necessarily this volume only represents a very small percentage of Mr. Halladay's output. Indeed it has been extremely difficult to make a selection so limited, and many powerful cartoons have been omitted for this reason.

We feel sure that thousands of people will be glad of the opportunity to own a book of this kind, typifying the work of a man who has endeared himself to all the readers of the Providence Journal and Evening Bulletin for the past fifteen years.
